From The Four
North Counties

With approximately 3,500 visitors having entered Malone Park to the scene of the North Alabama Fair promoters today predicted that with fair weather the remainder of the week that one of the greatest agricultural events in Twin City history would be recorded at the conclusion of the week.

Hugh Ballew, manager of the fair stated today that people were agast when they viewed the agricultural exhibits from over this section of North Alabama. He declared that as the crowds drifted through the mid-way and into the farm exhibit sections, back of the grandstands, words of commendation were heard on every side.

Posters and placards have been placed today to remind the crowds that the agricultural and home work exhibits are to be found back of the amusement sections. It was learned today that there are 1100 exhibits on the grounds, representing 102 farms.

Attracting the giant crowd that surged back and forth in Malone Park Monday night was the fireworks display at 9:30 o'clock. This display will be given free every night at the same hour, depicting the history of America from the early days of the nation to the present day.

The Horse show attracted much interest last night as did the poultry pens and splendid fancy work and agricultural product exhibit arranged about the grounds.

Leak That Stopped Flight

PLANE BURNS ON START OF NON-STOP FLIGHT TO PARIS

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Two men lost their lives this morning when the trans-Atlantic plane of Captain Rene Fonck crashed in flames and was destroyed in an attempt to take off on a 3600 mile non-stop flight to Paris.

The plane was valued at $100,000 without motors. The men killed were: Charles Clavier, French radio operator and Jacob Islamoff, Russian mechanic. They were trapped in the closed cabin of the huge three-motor by-plane.

Captain Fonck, the French ace in command of the flight, and Lieutenant Lons W. Curtin, U. S. N., American alternate pilot, leaped to safety before the plane burst into flames.

Igor Sikorsky, Russian designer and builder of the plane, could not be located immediately after the tragedy. He was reported to have begged in tears last night that the flight be postponed because of a cross-wind that endangered the take-off. An attempt was made to take off last Thursday but had to be postponed because of a gasoline leakage that was discovered at the last minute.

Afterwards Parisian friends of Captain Fonck urged him to make the flight for the honor of France, even at the risk of death.

MOBILE SITUATION CAUSING ANXIETY

The storm situation is causing anxiety on the part of local officials of the Decatur Cornice and Roofing Company and its subsidiary, the Decatur Iron and Steel Company, which is under contract for much construction work in the building of the state docks in the gulf city.

Reports received from Mobile that there had been no human fatalities proved a great relief to the officers of the company and the many friends here of Neal M. Speak, of this city, who is in Mobile as personal representative of the company during the construction period.

Reports that there had been some storm damage, however, worried the local people, who feared the docks may have been included in the storm sufferers.

James A. Nelson, for the past 12 years mayor of Decatur, Monday was re-elected for the seventh term of two years by a majority of 121 votes over John A. Thomason, prominent Decatur business man, the tabulation of the vote, completed about ten o'clock last night, revealed.

Nelson received 390 votes and Thomason 269.

All four members of the present board of aldermen were re-elected as follows: W. F. Boswell, Clyde Hendrix, S. H. Malone and W. E. Roper. The fifth place, unfilled since the removal to Florida of Philip Humphrey, who had been elected as alderman in the election two years ago, was awarded by the voters to Lawrence Lee, president of the Albany-Decatur Grotto club.

Messrs. Hendrix and Roper ran a close race for the honor of leading the ticket, the latter finally winning by polling the flattering total of 515 ballots.

Biggest Vote Polled
Decatur Monday polled the largest vote in her history, a total of 664 ballots being cast. Voting was spirited throughout the day, citizens evincing an unusual interest in the outcome of the campaign which had been quiet, but comprehensive, for several weeks.

The unusually big total caused the count to be delayed in completion later than is ordinarily the case and the exact result was not known until late.

Nelson's vote passed the necessary 333 mark, required to elect, sometime before the final tabulations were made, but several of the aldermanic races were so close, that the board's personnel was not known until after all of the ballots had been counted. It was established early that Aldermen Hendrix and Roper were certain of re-election. As the vote progressed, it

Malone Takes Three

B. L. Malone will lead the city of Albany as its executive head for the next two years, final tabulations of the enormous vote today revealing that Mr. Malone had won his race by a majority of 279 votes. Nearly 1,400 votes were cast in the election.

So soon as the official count, tabulated at the Albany city hall and at the offices of The Daily revealed Malone's majority to be beyond the number of votes to be counted, a demonstration was begun on the streets of the city, winding into Decatur and back into Albany, finally halting at the city hall. A band was hastily organized and led the way for many automobiles joined in the procession.

Election night passed quietly, with much interest centering on the mayor's race in the early hours and only an occasional query regarding the aldermanic races in the four wards.

The race for president of the council between M. R. Rankin, the nominee, and H. M. Priest likewise held the attention of voters who crowded into the city hall where Rankin's 50 vote lead was finally established.

Third Ward Comes
With 128 votes cast in the third ward election officials completed their count near eight o'clock and immediately notified The Daily.

The vote indicated that Dr. F. L. Carswell had carried the east town box with a lead of 19 votes. Priest had doubled Rankin's vote in that box 83 to 38.

South Town Next
Albany box 2 was the second to come into The Daily office, the 353 vote tabulation having been completed in almost record time. Malone had established a lead in that box of 40 votes, breaking the Anxiety of local people was quieted somewhat today as news began trickling in from loved ones in Florida, many of whom had narrow escapes from death and possible serious injury.

With the storm moving slowly westward local people began turning their eyes toward New Orleans Mobile, Pensacola and other smaller towns where relatives are residing.

Much interest has been evinced from news of Pensacola and the storm damage at that point. No news, however, is available from Pensacola, that city being entirely cut off from the outside world. Dispatches from Birmingham indicate that the Associated Press staff men are braving the dangers of death to get into the isolated city and let the outside world know the condition existing at that point.

City In Panic, Declaration of Louisville And Nashville Employees Who Have Been To Scene

(By Associated Press)

Having left a trail of death and destruction in Southern Florida, the tropical hurricane, which swept in from the Bahamas last Friday night had passed over Pensacola and Mobile today and was converging on New Orleans after striking several southern Alabama towns.

As relief workers penetrated into the debris on the east coast of Florida, the death list there continued to mount steadily.

Conservative estimates place the dead at 400 and the injured at 5,000.

The known dead at noon stood at 388 and the known injured at 1,532, but many of the rescue workers thought the list of dead might reach 700, when wrecked buildings had been cleared and final word had come from the isolated sections in the Everglades.

Feverish efforts were being made to get in touch with Pensacola, which has been isolated for more than 24 hours, after wind there had reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour. The last word from Pensacola, a fragmentary radio message yesterday, said property damage was heavy, but that there had been no loss of life.

Mobile, cut off from communication for several hours, was heard from today, word coming it had suffered no serious damage. Other nearby Alabama towns were not so fortunate, however, reports trickling through telling of loss of life at both Jackson and Bay Minette.

Reports from the Florida west coast, hitherto thought to have escaped fatalities, told of eight persons having drowned in the gulf off Fort Myers. Two were women and the others were sailors from a fishing craft.

Damage to buildings and public utilities wrought by the hurricane as it swept along the west coast toward Pensacola was estimated at more than $6,500,000, while that to citrus fruit at close to $10,000,000.

While the storm howled its way along the gulf coast, Florida, with the aid of neighboring states and the national Red Cross began to get its work of relief and rescue well underway in Miami, Miami Beach, Coral Gables, Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Hialeah, Fort Lauderdale, Moorehaven and other inland towns.

An official statement issued at Jacksonville, on behalf of Mayor Dammers, of Coral Gables, said the damage there was not as great as first reported. Warning was given, however, that as the debris was cleared away throughout the Miami district there would be a mounting list of dead.

Relief trains were being rushed into the stricken area and the Jacksonville Red Cross was ready to send a supply train to Sebring, where 1,000 refugees from Moorehaven were reported to be quartered.

Hollywood and Fort Lauderdale sent messages to Jacksonville, asking for clothing, especially for children, as well as cots, oil stoves and food supplies. In Miami, the work of caring for the wounded progressed rapidly with churches, theatres and other large buildings converted into temporary hospitals, despite their lack of roofs and windows.

Ice, milk and drinking water were shipped from nearby cities and with a large amount of foodstuffs already taken in by train, the Miami district seems fairly well taken care of.

PENSACOLA REPORTED TO BE GRIPPED BY PANIC NOW

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Pensacola is in panic. There has probably been loss of life, with property loss beyond estimate. This word was communicated here through employees of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. The L. & N. roundhouse and freight depot were demolished. The docks are in ruins.

These reports, meagre, disconnected and incomplete, say that the property damage cannot be estimated at this time. The railroad is torn up by washouts between Bay Minette and Flomaton. It will require two days to repair the damage.

The Escambia river and Little Escambia creek have washed out bridges and tracks for miles. Much of the trackage is under water.

The railroad employees in the district were not certain as to loss of life, but they reported "terrible conditions."

Pensacola was ravaged by a hurricane that reached a velocity of more than 100 miles an hour. This report said "many were injured"

Malone Is Glad To Serve City; Is Grateful For Aid

B. L. Malone, winner in the municipal campaign for mayor of the city of Albany, today announced readiness to serve his city in the capacity of chief executive.

"I want to take occasion to say to my friends that I appreciate the support given to me and that I plan to begin with the help of an excellent council, constructive building for the city so soon as my term of office begins. I am not unmindful of the interest taken in my campaign, I am not unmindful of the duties expected of me and I will try with might and main to bring about an increased good will, an improved business condition. I am hopeful that the administration which I am to lead will tend to improve the general prosperity of the people.

Nelson Says He Is "Grateful" To Friends For Aid

James A. Nelson, incumbent, re-elected mayor of Decatur for the seventh consecutive time in Monday's balloting, thanked his friends for their aid.

"I am deeply appreciative of the loyal support given me by my friends," he declared, "and, of course, I feel a deep sense of gratification that the people of Decatur have again honored me. To those good friends who worked so untiringly in my behalf, and to the voters of Decatur generally, I extend my appreciation, and rededicate myself to the task of attempting, at all times, to do my part in so administering the affairs of the City of Decatur that its progress will be accelerated, and its people happy and prosperous."

Athens Elects Board Of Aldermen In Spirited Race

BUSINESS MAN ATHENS CHOICE

Third Term Mayor To Continue As Executive

(By D. L. ROSENAU, Jr.) Charles W. Sarver by an overwhelming majority was re-elected mayor of Athens for his third term at the municipal election Monday. Mr. Sarver received 413 votes, while his opponents, A. D. Carter and T. O. Black, captured 192 and 41 respectively. The old board of aldermen were also successful in every case, R. W. Martin receiving 466 votes to 184 for T. P. Smith; R. H. Cole 440 to Sam Bowen's 205; R. H. Richardson 374 and W. B. Cole 276 to W. Hendricks 422 to M. S. Kenner's 226; and J. B. Sarver 569 votes without opposition. All of the old board ran except L. P. Cartwright, he being succeeded now by R. W. Martin.

Mr. Sarver has already two terms as mayor and is spoken of as being the best mayor Athens has ever had, having re-established the city's credit in addition to making a large number of civic improvements. He is a merchant and successful business man and favored city ownership of the local power and light plant. He is also a trustee of Athens College and prominent in Methodist circles all over the state. The election was rather spirited, in spite of the fact that the day marked the opening of fall circuit court. The number of votes cast set a new record in an Athens election, and the interest shown by women voters was out of the ordinary, as they were constant visitors at the polls in the course of the day.

APPOINTED COUNTY SOLICITOR

Young Wall has been appointed County Solicitor by Circuit Solicitor D. C. Almon. He will serve until January 15 when the office will be filled by the appointee of John R. Samples of Hartselle, recently elected circuit solicitor. Mr. Sample has not as yet announced his appointment, and it is understood that there are a number of applicants for the position.

Young Wall is a brother of Fred Wall and is well known in Athens, having practiced here a number of years and having many friends. He returned recently from Canandaigua, N. Y., where he has been living for the past few months.

ALMON SPEAKS

Hon. Edward B. Almon, United States Congressman from the Eighth District, spoke in Athens Monday morning, making a short address before the opening of court. The theme of Mr. Almon's speech was mainly an enlightenment as to the activities of congress during the past year. He praised very highly the offer of Henry Ford for Muscle Shoals and stated in unequivocal terms his opposition to the offer of the Alabama Power company and associated companies. At the conclusion of his talk he remained and talked personally to many of his hearers.

CIRCUIT COURT IN SESSION

The Limestone Circuit Court convened here Monday. Judge James E. Horton of Athens presiding. The morning was spent in organizing the grand and petit juries and in the change to the grand jury. The latter body shortly afterwards to its quarters and will probably be in session for the entire week. W. G. Martin, Athens business man, is foreman. T. C. Almon of Albany is acting as special circuit solicitor in the absence of his father, D. C. Almon. This week will be devoted to civil jury cases, criminal jury cases being heard next week and the week after if necessary to clear the docket.

West Albany Third

Totaling 302 ballots, the West Albany had their report on the way a little after ten o'clock. The race in that ward was featured in the lead of H. M. Priest with six votes over Rankin. Malone came into the central Albany box with a combined lead of 83 votes.

Crowd Waits Then the long period of uncertainty began. Central Albany box with the largest total in some years, tolled on into the night hours, giving out partial reports as they rested momentarily from their labors.

Malone's lead began to grow, then slowly receded only to come back stronger and race toward 300 majority.

At one time the count between Priest and Rankin stood at a lead for the latter of four votes, indicating just how close the race for the president of the council was running. The Rankin lead went back and forth for the remainder of the night until about 12:30 when the official vote was tabulated and showed him to be declared the winner by 50 votes.

Aldermanic Races

A. C. Dillehay led the entire aldermanic ticket with a total of 1115, with F. A. Bloodworth a second with 1011. R. C. Billings was third with a total of 937. W. L. Hatchett, the only returning member of the present council, totaled a vote of 836. V. L. King reached to 761, W. S. Reeves received 729. W. H. Winton received 675 and A. B. Harvey received the last place on the council with 528, defeating Lamar Penney by 18 votes.

Hundreds of calls were answered at The Daily office during the evening and many people remained at the office until results were definitely determined. The Daily staff kept in behind the vote in both cities, with the result that all three boxes in Albany were reported to the city hall officially by The Daily before the results had been given to the waiting crowds by returning officers.

The municipal campaign ended today without a contest. The same mayor and aldermen were re-elected without any opposition. Only a light vote was polled, 144, less than one-half the voting strength.

The present mayor and aldermen have in hand the construction of a water works system for the town, and this in a large measure responsible for there being no contest. It was reasoned by many that they began this improvement, and should see it through.

Mayor Gibson will thus enter his second term of office, the first term he automatically becoming mayor on account of the resignation of Mayor Day.

VETERAN MINISTER REMEMBERED BY CONGREGATION

Rev. R. W. Anderson, who for the past four years has been the pastor of the First Methodist church, South, at this point, was presented with a loving cup just preceding the eleven o'clock service last Sunday, superintendent of the Sunday school, J. H. Riddle making the presentation, on behalf of the church congregation.

It was quite an effort for Prof. Riddle to say just what he wanted to say on that occasion, he having known the recipient for more than forty years. He spoke of the friendship existing between the two over span of years, culminating with the pastoral service here of the past four years.

It was a memorable setting. There stood the veteran pastor, who for a half century had carried the message of hope to thousands of people who came within the realm of his itinerancy. He started at a time when the very foundation of methodism in this state was being laid. On horseback he rode the trails already existing, and made new ones; he preached to small audiences; he labored under adverse circumstances; he worked for a pittance for the love of the labor in hand; he erected meeting houses where there were none, and planted the seeds of religious thought, that have grown and multiplied, and is part of the expression of the magnificent showing made in this state today.

Now, by reason of the infirmities of age, he will, after the session of the North Alabama Conference, sever his relations as an active pastor, and superannuate, accepting the nice superannuate home at Albertville, where he and his good wife will sit in the beautiful twilight of life, as hand in hand they walk together down its flower strewn way.

Dr. Anderson accepted the beautiful gift from his congregation, and made a few appropriate remarks. He left no doubt in the minds of all who heard him, that he prized the gift very highly, and made the remark in closing, "that money could not buy it."

With the passing of Dr. Anderson as active pastor, another of the pioneer preachers ceases his labors, and methodism suffers a distinct loss, for they had a style all their own, simple and fervent and full of faith some of the things which made their ministry so effective.

Since coming to Hartselle, Dr. Anderson has endeared himself to all of every denomination here, and has friends, true ones, who will be indeed sorry to know that he will move out of their midst. As they go to another locality, Dr. Anderson and wife may rest assured that the best wishes of all go with them, and pray that a good God may hold them in His tender keeping, and that their lamp of life may receive no rude blast to hasten its extinction. The loving cup bore the following inscription: To—R. W. Anderson, September 19, 1926.

PASTOR'S WIFE RECIPIENT OF BEAUTIFUL PRESENT

At a meeting of the Methodist ladies missionary society held Monday afternoon, one of the features of the meeting was the presentation of a beautiful silver flower loving basket to Mrs. R. W. Anderson, who with her husband will soon move to Albertville to make their future home.

Mrs. F. C. Bardsley presented the basket on behalf of the members of the society, and made a splendid little speech of presentation. She reviewed at some length the helpfulness of the recipient in all worthy endeavors since coming to Hartselle, and spoke feelingly of the separation soon to come. It is safe to say that Dr. and Mrs. Anderson have performed as many ministrations of kindness to those who were sick, and to those who actually needed help, as any pastor and wife ever stationed here. Mrs. Anderson was indeed a helpmate, and had the happy faculty of doing the right thing just at the right time.

The two had a way all their own in finding those who were sick and needed help, and into many homes of the poor they have brought a ray of sunshine. Mrs. Anderson was so overwhelmed at this act of kindness on the part of the women of the church, that she was too full for utterance, the tears of joy and appreciation spoke more eloquently than it is possible to do with words.

The basket bore the following engraved inscription: "To Mrs. R. W. Anderson from Hartselle Missionary Society and Friends. September 20, 1926."

appeared almost as if all voters had cast their ballots for these two members of the board. Singularly enough they are the only two bankers on the board.

The Final Vote The final vote in the races was announced as follows: Nelson, 390; Thomason, 269. For aldermen—Beazwell 396; Burleson 247; Hendrix 505; Lee 307; Malone 339; Meadows 279; Moseley 283; Roper 515; Royer 150; Whaley 221.

The count in the mayor's race developed several interesting features. At the time the first 100 ballots had been counted, the totals showed Thomason leading by six votes, the totals at that time being Nelson 42 and Thomason 48. The tabulation at the time the next 100 had been counted, however,

SAN FRANCISCO.—Because of the strange fact that divorce actions in California fall off approximately 50 per cent during the summer season San Francisco judges are in rare humor these days.

"It gives us a chance to get caught up with our calendars," they say delightedly. "It may only be the lull before the storm but we'll be all set for the fall rush when it commences."

It has long been a puzzle just why divorces should fall off so sharply in the summertime.

Spring and fall, according to Superior Judges Timothy I. Fitzpatrick of this city, are veritable open seasons to be at it then.

But during the winter holiday season and the summer months there is a decided slackening, Judge Fitzpatrick says. The reason for the winter falling off, according to Judge Fitzpatrick, is apparently obvious, because nobody wants to get shoved out in the cold.

There is no such reason to explain the summer phenomenon.

It might be, Judge Fitzpatrick believes, that in the summer time everybody is feeling good and the sharp edges of domestic friction are blunted. Possibly it is the vacation lure.

And then again, according to the Judge (who is a good Native Son, the balmy California summer weather might have something to do with it.

The pleasant days for the judges, however, are numbered. Fall will be here soon and then the divorce rush will be on again. The courts will be literally swamped with men and women tired of each other and seeking a way out.

A Fiji Island cannibal chief who has been a feature at the Seventh Day Adventists camp meeting in Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on the high seas today, bound for home with a strange jumble of memories of the white man's civilization. His name is Ratu Meli Salabagi.

Although Chief Salabagi was enthusiastic about coming to America he was delighted to sail for home. One thing, however, saddened him. His interpreter, Rev. J. E. Fulton, who taught him the gospel more than a quarter of a century ago, did not return with him.

Fulton has been with Ratu practically every day since they arrived in America together to attend the quadrennial convention of the world's conference of Seventh Day Adventists, held in Milwaukee.

In addition Fulton has interpreted for the South Sea Islander in lectures given in many of the largest cities of the country, where he has told his story of the transformation that has come to Fiji since the arrival of the gospel missionaries, whose teachings have caused cannibalism to cease.

"Ratu Meli has seen the wonders of twentieth century civilization," the Rev. Mr. Fulton said. "He will sing the praises of America for a long time to come, but he will be glad to put his feet in the sand in place of the hot, smooth sidewalks that have well nigh blistered them during the sweltering hot days he has been in the cities."

LOS ANGELES.—Not all the romances of Hollywood blossom before a camera.

And then the fun began. Despite an eloquent appeal, James was refused the role, but will be married to Miss Blackton as soon as he finishes a production for Inspiration Pictures.

"ELLA CINDERS" IS COMING TO PRINCESS

Fireside humor and pathos as exemplified by the comic strip of the home newspaper becomes a living, moving thing upon the screen in the picturization of "Ella Cinders," Colleen Moore's latest vehicle for First National, which begins an engagement at the Princess theater on Thursday.

The picture, made by John McCormick, responsible for the highly successful screen version of "Irene," deals with the exploits of the once winner and victor of a small town movie contest promoted by swindlers, with a trip to Hollywood, all expenses paid, as the grand prize. With the conclusion of the contest, the glib schemers vanish from the scene, their pockets bulging with their disproportionate percentage of money, derived from entry fees, while the heroine is left to shift for herself in a city overrun with beauties.

Miss Moore, who is always delightful in a Cinderella theme, can be expected to play her part in a drama of such background. She again has the services of Lloyd Hughes as her leading man and is surrounded by players of proven capabilities.

Alfred E. Green, her mentor in many past screen successes, directed Miss Moore in this new offering.

Not Whole House Left, Word From Fort Lauderdale

Florida points indicating that they are safe. A telegram from Goodloe Morris, now at West Palm Beach stated that they were safe, but there had been much property damage. Barton Morris at Jacksonville stated that he had just completed a tour of the east coast and was back in Jacksonville before the storm broke.

Friends of Andrew P. Morgan, former employee of the Morgan county Motor company, today inquired if any news had been heard from Mr. Morgan. No word has been received. Mr. Morgan is located at Ft. Lauderdale.

Mrs. C. D. Waite has received word from her son, Alton Waite, resident of Hollywood, Fla., stating that he is well and that he is engaged in the work of reconstruction, now already underway. Mrs. Waite stated today that her son was in a cyclone 17 years ago which struck at Harms, Tenn., then the home of the family and that he was blown some distance, but was unhurt.

Marion Davies' next picture, will be started within the next few days, Irving Thalberg, production executive at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, announced today.

Hobart Henley, the director of "The Auction Block," "His Secretary," and "A Certain Young Man," will megaphone Miss Davies through "Tillie's" labor troubles.

Realism in art can be carried to excess. During the filming of "Down the Stretch," A Universal race story, at the Riverside track, Ward Crane acted as bookmaker and used real money.

The sporting citizens of Riverside, pressed into service as a race track throng, entered into the atmosphere so wholeheartedly that they took the race and book-making seriously. They placed bets and collected their winnings, forgetting the clicking cameras. Crane found himself short when the time came for an accounting to the property man.

Samuel Goldwyn, the veteran motion picture producer, increased to $50,000 his insurance policy on Vilma Banky, the beautiful Hungarian actress who played opposite Valentino in the late "sheik's" last picture. Miss Banky's increased screen value and her narrow escape from death when trampled by a horse during the filming of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" were responsible for Goldwyn's action, it was said.

Henry East, trainer of dogs for the "movies," declares his greatest problem is fleas. His intelligent animals are carefully cleaned before appearing on the set, but sometimes a voracious insect will ruin feet of film by making a heroic dog turn his attention from the noble work of saving a heroine into the pressing and intimate business of scratching himself.

"Hank," one of East's cleverest canine actors, is starring with Alec B. Francis in "The Return of Peter Grimm."

'Husbands Can Keep House Better Than Wives'

IN these days of woman's downright rights and the sweeping emancipation of her sex, she has invaded man's sphere to the extent of business, short hair, pants, cigarettes, and a lot of other what-have-you's.

Now comes the news that the strong men of Lancaster, England, are going to school to learn to rear babies.

Manifestly it is a counter-offensive. They are going to invade woman's sphere just as their own has been overrun. "Well, SOMEBODY has got to raise the children," is their explanation, implying that the women aren't doing it any more.

Men are just as fond of children as women are, according to the newest school of psycho-biologists. They have simply let women do all the mothering because they, the men, had so many outside interests that children bored them easily. Now that women are taking over the outside interests—going to business, bossing the political situation and all that sort of thing—husbands have a better show in the home. Men believe they could run a home more efficiently, anyway.

Men of Lancaster, England, Evidently Deciding That SOMEBODY Had to Raise the Children, Organized a Father's Council, and Here They Are Meeting to Receive Instruction. Right: Ruth Andrea, of the Follies, Whose Husband Complained, "She sang to Broadway while I walked the baby."

TODAY 12 Years Ago

From The Daily of
 September 21, 1914.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stahlman will return to Nashville tomorrow after a visit to her father, S. T. Wert.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Clopton left today for Somerville, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. D. D. McGehee are expected back tomorrow from a week's camping trip near Knoxville.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Hamilton and little son Earl, are visiting in Nashville.

Mrs. Will Bixby of Jamestown, N. Y., is the guest of Mrs. J. D. Jervis.

The election is over, let's settle down to work.

The first fall colds have come, as well as the first fall bills for coal.

The Associated Press got there first again. What newspaper gave you the first service on the Florida storm?—The Daily.

The Koss Construction Company won't make the citizens of Albany-Decatur a bit disagreeable, if they hurried work on the new bridge. Looks like things are moving mighty slow. Limestone folks from the southern part of the county enjoy coming to Albany-Decatur, they will enjoy it a great deal more when they can use the new bridge.

The Dempsey-Tunney fight is the next chance the Daily has to serve its readers free of charge, serving them first and in the best manner possible. Of course the Daily is sorry that there are not seats for all the people who will attend the returns at that fight, but this newspaper hopes that lack of seating arrangement will not keep the crowds away and feels certain that a jam equal to that packing the streets on election night will crowd in front of the Daily to receive the blow-by-blow detail right off the Associated Press wires from the ringside. The Daily is always glad for an opportunity to serve its clientele of subscribers, glad that they take an interest in the things which interest this newspaper. There is nothing better than having the crowd back of you, driving you to get the returns as fast as they happen. That is what newspapers are for, to get there first and get there right.

Well, we see where they have invented a gasless auto. Pretty soon they will invent a tooth brush without bristles, a pair of shoes with no strings, or buttons, perhaps other things. People will wonder how it is done and laugh at the first time such a thing is heralded. Radio would have been laughed at some years ago, the great dam at Muscle Shoals would have been laughed out of existence had it not been built at a time of actual need. Again necessity is the mother of invention, one man or woman does what he or she believes can be done while the others laugh and say it's preposterous to believe that such a thing can be done. That is a peculiarity of this world that brings delight to many people, they get the thrill of being surprised that the other fellow had the stuff in him to make it a go after all.

ALBANY-DECATUR PEOPLE PLAN A RELIEF CAMPAIGN FOR FLORIDIANS.

Albany-Decatur as usual is up in front, this time in the role of administering to the ills of others. It was announced Monday that the Red Cross would take the field on Tuesday to raise subscription for the sufferers in Florida.

No greater mission could be fulfilled by the needs of an unfortunate fellowman.

There is not a more worthy cause to which money might be placed.

Remember that first a contribution to this fund is your honorable duty and secondly that the people of Florida would do as much for the people of Alabama.

Florida will rebuild, certainly, but now she needs the aid of her sister states of the southland. Those sister states will respond, each city with its quota, even far back into the hills will the call for contribution reach, many will be voluntary.

THE FIRST NIGHT CROWD INDICATED AN EXCELLENT WEEK.

The first day of the North Alabama fair has passed into history, five more big days and five more big nights for the people of this section remain.

Fair executives were pleased with the first night crowd and that after getting a late start in the day and having to do double duty to get things ready for the evening performances and exhibitions. Aside from the amusement section of the fair the educational agricultural exhibits are a feast for the eyes, giving the one who views a real insight into the agricultural wealth of this section.

Cullman, Lawrence and Limestone counties have responded nobly to the call for exhibits and the people of this section will do well to go see what advance has been made in home agriculture in the past few years. Attend the fair, it is an encouragement to those who have labored to give their counties the finest exhibits.

A WORD FOR THE MEN ELECTED AND THOSE LEAVING OFFICE SHORTLY.

The elections in the two cities are over. Tranquility again reigns on the city streets where only a few short hours ago there was an atmosphere of excitement, uncertainty. A few more days and a new board in Albany begins making strides for a splendid record for the next two years. The Decatur board continues as it was, striving to keep pace with itself in its excellent activities of the past two years.

The Decatur election witnessed the defeat of good men and the election of good men. Decatur voters witnessed the steps of progress made by their board and they chose to ride the same horse for the next two years. The election of these same officials, with the addition of Lawrence Lee is truly a tribute to the worth of the men now in office.

In Albany as in Decatur good men won and good men lost. Political ambitions were made by some, others won business ambitions, some made good on tickets which their own people prepared for them, having run for their friends and not because they wished to fill so difficult a place.

The election is over, the time is here to begin strides that have never been witnessed heretofore in civic expansion. To the men going out of office in Albany the Daily takes occasion to express an appreciation for the services they have given to their city and to the new board the Daily can but say that it wishes the best of success and lends its support to every constructive move which that body might see fit to make. Let us forget the election and go to work for greater cities.

ONE OF THE REAL THINGS THAT KIWANIS HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

A movement that has attained widespread growth over the United States and has found particularly good headway in Morgan county is that movement which Kiwanians choose to call the Farm Relations movement, a movement designated to increase good will between town and rural people, designed to help in the solving of problems of the two classes, the thirty-five per cent producing farmer and the sixty-five per cent consuming public, living in towns.

No more forceful an editorial idea has been presented in some months on the subject of farm relations than this article which is reproduced below, with reference to the aims of Kiwanis in keeping the farm movement going under full steam. This article is contributed by Hec Fulkerson in a current issue of Kiwanis International.

In the United States the newspapers are filled with the reports of various governmental attempts to relieve the farmer. In Canada the whole country has wakened to the fact that upon the farmer depends the prosperity of the nation and they too are looking forward on the farmer question.

Pioneer in the movement for better relations and a better understanding between the farmer and the city man, Kiwanis must bear down hard on this objective of the organization.

There have been other movements to help farmers. All of them had either a political or selfish aspect until Kiwanis came into the field. We have no sovereign panacea for the ills of the farmer. We have no pet theory for his emancipation. All we are striving for is a better understanding between him and the city man, that understanding each other, they can help each other.

You cannot help a farmer by making speeches to him. At every school house and country store the farmer is talked to death by politicians who forget him the moment the election is over until such time as they again need his vote.

You cannot help the farmer by feeding him. The one thing the farmer has as consolation for his lot in life is the fact that his well filled smoke house and pantry contain food of a quantity and quality with which no city restaurant can compete.

Let us try and reverse the matter and hold friendly meetings where the farmer may do the speaking. Let him speak right out in meeting and tell us his troubles, instead of listening to us who so little understand his problems. Having given him a hearing, let us do something about it. Mark Twain said that there was an awful lot of talk about the weather but nobody ever seemed to do anything about it. What is true of the weather is true about our friends the farmers. There is a lot of talk about the farmer and his problems but no one ever seems to do anything about it.

The Kiwanis club which will gather around its board the farmers of its neighborhood and get from them their local problems and then set in motion the wheels which will correct their difficulties will do more to establish friendly relations between farmer and city man than all the talk that has ever been made on the subject.

About thirty-five per cent of our population are farmers. On this thirty-five per cent depends the food supply of the other sixty-five per cent. This is an economic situation which demands that the thirty-five per cent be adequately compensated for their products and at the same time have the conditions under which they work made as pleasant as possible. Kiwanis can have no higher ideal than to help consummate this desirable condition.

Thus has the local club attempted to gain the best results for Albany-Decatur in the vast and wealthy trading area in which is centered two of the finest cities on the globe. Go into the rural sections if you doubt the worthiness of such a statement, test the farmer regarding the Kiwanis club and you will find that in some cases he thinks of a city in terms of its Kiwanis club. That is what this organization has done through the summer months and what it plans for agriculture and townspeople alike if in the years to come. Keep in touch with the movement and watch the results.

TEACH CHILDREN TO BREATHE DEEPLY

The Posture Is Benefited, Thereby Basically Improving the Health, When the Lung Capacity Is Adequate to Blood's Needs.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
 Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

NOT so long ago a New York State lady wrote me for ideas regarding health demonstrations she is to conduct for the benefit of country children. She appeared to be particularly interested in correct posture.

I suggested that she point out the importance of deep breathing. If there is one thing more than another which to my mind deserves the attention of all persons interested in the physical well-being of the race, it is deep breathing.

When you see a lot of children in bathing it is amazing what a large proportion of them have hollow chests, prominent collar bones, narrow shoulders, and other evidences of deficient lung development. One of the reasons why so many girls have the outrageous figures they possess, is because they haven't enough body development to give them form.

A measure I recommend to develop lung capacity is a blowing exercise. Have the child stand in front of a lace curtain or a piece of paper suspended in a doorway, and ask him to blow at the object. He does this until he sees it wave in the air.

Of course it is not the blowing that does the good, but in order to blow he must fill the lungs with air. When you try this with a large number of persons you will be surprised how many of them just give a little puff and regard that as blowing. A well-developed pair of lungs, at a distance of nine or ten feet, will cause a lace curtain to move.

To teach the children to stand correctly and to breathe correctly will do much to improve their nourishment and their general knowledge. Food cannot digest without oxygen and there can't be a sufficient supply of oxygen without deep breathing.

A person can take off weight by reducing his food intake, but he can't go far toward putting on weight by increasing the food intake. It is necessary not alone to increase the food intake, but also to increase the supply of oxygen. Almost always you will find that the skinny, undernourished child is a child who does not breathe as he should. Every child should be taught the first principles of food knowledge. He should know what to eat and why particular foods are necessary to furnish a balanced diet.

As I have observed children, particularly in the country, it seems to me they are too generously dressed. They wear too much clothing, but no child can appear well dressed unless correct posture is added to the possession of good clothes.

A.—Recreation and diversion will says the present restriction of immigration will soon end poverty among Jewish people in the United States, and in ten or twenty years, "there will be no need for relief."

REGARDLESS of immigration, what will be the Jewish population of the United States one hundred years hence? Certainly not fewer than thirty to fifty millions. There are 1,500,000 Jews in New York city alone. They take care of their children and the children live, having a lower death rate than any other race.

M. P. Q.—Can a gottle in the early stages be cured? What are the symptoms?

A.—Yes, in most instances. Nervousness, palpitation, swelling of the throat are all indications of a gottle. If the trouble is suspected the doctor should be consulted—since each case requires specific treatment.

E. C. Q.—What should a girl of nearly 17, 5 ft. 4 in. tall weigh?

2.—What will reduce the ankles and calves of the legs?

A.—She should weigh about 125 pounds.

2.—Exercise should bring about results. Walking, dancing, climbing, running, etc., are all beneficial.

Q.—What will remove a large brown wart on the lower eyelid— which seems to be growing larger?

A.—You should see your doctor and be guided by his judgment in the matter. It is never wise to attempt to treat a growth of any kind, much less so near the eye, without careful medical supervision.

A. B. Q.—Is there any cure for a simple gottle? Would iodine help?

A.—Yes, but the treatment should be advised after careful examination, since each case demands specific attention. It might, but should only be taken under the direction of your doctor.

Alabama Lady Tells How She Obtained Relief by Taking Cardui. Feels Fine and Enjoys Life Now, She Says.

Talladega, Ala.—Mrs. Mary Hardy, 406 Henderson Avenue, this city, says that seven years ago she "got down sick" and was unable to attend to her household. "I have never been so weak before or since," she says. "I had a terrible pain in my side—so sore in my side and the lower part of my body. "Across my back ached, and I was so nervous I couldn't stand up. I had just about given up when some one who came to see me began talking about Cardui. This caused me to get it. I took about two bottles before I saw much improvement. "After this, though, I picked up right away. I slept better at night. I was hungry, enjoyed my food, which I hadn't done for some time. "The pain and soreness gradually left my side. I regained my strength. I took about six bottles and left off for awhile, then took two or three more. . . I feel just fine, enjoy life and can work now, too."

Cardui is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. It has helped thousands of suffering women and should help you, too. NC-168

A continuous performance

Nothing is permanent in railroading.

Larger cars and engines must be bought to handle greater loads; the roadbed must ever be kept in good condition; new ties and heavier rails must be laid to support heavier trains at high speeds; and in places the course of the line must be changed to reduce curves and grades.

Shop facilities must be enlarged, terminals improved and bridges rebuilt to carry the ever-growing trainloads. New signalling devices are being installed, and new tracks, yards and sidings built to handle the growing traffic of the South. This process of change, improvement and renewal goes on day and day out throughout the year.

But the service must never stop. The way must ever be kept open for the great freights as they rush through the night carrying products of the South to distant markets, and the world's goods to Southern buyers. And the Crescent Limited, the Royal Palm and other passenger trains must not be delayed.

Railroading on the Southern Railway System is a continuous performance both in service rendered and in provision for handling the greater traffic of the future.

Everything used on a railroad wears out. Last year about $50,000,000 was spent by the Southern in replacing things that had worn out.

The value of reputation

THE value of a man is what he does, the worth he shows the world. If he doesn't prove it, he's worthless.

The value of a watch, a skillet, an automobile, is what it does, the worth it shows its user. It may be of highest serving power. If it can't prove it, it's useless. The reputation of any product is the known proof of its worth. The value of that known proof is that you can recognize it.

When you buy an advertised watch or skillet, you buy value with a reputable manufacturer's name behind it. You don't have to wait till you use it to know it. The qualities which made it advertisable have proved the worth for you. You need only ask for the product by name. Fastened securely to that name are quality, service, satisfaction.

READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS. THEY FAMILIARIZE YOU WITH ESTABLISHED REPUTATIONS.

Still if the nations were square enough to make the league work they could get along without it.

If life seems dull, sharpen up your interests a bit.

One Neighbor (to another)—Is this your advertisement in the paper for a lost dog?

"Why, you never had a dog to lose."

"I know; but I want one now, and I think I can make a satisfactory selection from the animals the advertisements will bring in."

For every man who is willing to "finish something," ten are ready to "start something."

A New Jersey court has held that a man has a legal right to rule his home. Yes, and he also has a legal right to fight a buzz-saw.

I was just a prairie flower growing wilder hour by hour; I got married—now you see I'm as tame as I can be.

Friendship helps, of course, but you never heard of friendship alone bringing in repeat orders.

"The heights are lonely"—whether they be intellectual, spiritual or social.

She: And what are they?

He: Blondes and brunettes.

When you get to the end of your rope, tie a knot in it and hang on.

"Should a man propose to a girl on his knees?"

Either that or she should get off.

"Oh, yes, all I have to do is to put the money in. She draws it out."

Sambo, who had had several weeks' hard life on a French battlefield, was asked by an officer, "Where are you from, Sambo?"

"I'm from Alabama, boss," said Sambo, "and if I ever get back there again, I'll never be from there no mo' boss."

"It ain't the whistle that pulls the train."

TWO TEAMS SEE ACTION AT HIGH

Fight For Berths Will Wax Warm During The Week

Two full teams of candidates put in an appearance in Albany high regalia yesterday afternoon for the first practice since the opening of school, with the likelihood that several more will be added to the string of grid talent as the warm afternoons wear away.

The boys showed excellent physical condition after a summer of vacation, but many of the lads have taken the precaution to spend their summers at hard labor rather than merging myriads of confessions with football appetites. Scrimmage will probably follow during the week, so soon as the usual epidemic of blistered feet and ripped shoulders is worn out. The line looks like it will average from 140 to 150 pounds this year.

Cincy Drops Twin Bill, Yanks In Slump Drop Pair To Chicago Sox

The Cincinnati Reds lost badly needed ground in the race for the National league flag yesterday when they were stopped by Boston in a pair of games. The Reds dropped the first 4-3 and the second 3-0. The Cards were idle for the afternoon.

The Cincy hurlers, Rixey and Laque, outpitched the Boston hurling entry, but managed to lose their ground in the pinch. Errors accounted for Rixey's loss. Errors also counted against Laque in the second.

The twin loss placed the Cards two full games in the lead.

The Pirates took one from the Phillies 4-0 when Bush was in excellent form, allowing but two hits for the afternoon. The Pirates were busy taking ten blows for a fat batting average and incidentally drew within two and a half games of the Redlegs.

In the American league things might have proved more than ordinary interesting had the Indians won, but they didn't. The Yanks lost a pair to the Chicago White Sox.

The Yankees stepped momentarily from the batting slump in the second game but were unable to tie the count, losing 4-3.

Cleveland was losing to Boston 3-2 in ten innings, the Boston folks running away with the verdict by hitting hard at opportune moments. Cleveland was able to get but seven safeties off Wingfield.

The games left New York in the lead by three full games, a lead that looks pretty good as the teams march down the home stretch toward a world series conflict. The Yanks will have to win five of their next six games to clinch the pennant, while Cleveland must play perfect baseball.

The Senators moved a notch closer to the Athletics in third place when the A's split a pair with Detroit, 8-0 and 5-2. Rommel was invincible in the first game and stopped the Detroiters with two hits.

Washington took a pair from the Browns when Coveleskie and Jones were both in excellent form. The Senators made 17 hits in the last game off Ballou and Davis.

The Athletics are hanging on to third place by two and a half games, a margin the Senators can wipe out provided the Athletics continue to find their troubles.

Jack Dempsey is all ready for the fight according to the Associated Press, while Gartland Rice declares that the champion has nothing to risk at the stake, Dempsey, says Rice, has an unlooked for quality in his left hook. He believes that Tunney has only an outside show to come across at Philadelphia on Thursday night.

Dempsey surprised his followers yesterday by smiling to appear in his final exhibition. He contented himself with road work and some light work with the bag. Jack believes he is in top form for the fight and now is resting for the bell that will announce one of the greatest fights of the age on Thursday night.

Indications of the seat sale tend to show that the whole country is interested in the fistic honor battle and it is likely that the vast stadium is going to be packed with thousands of howling fans.

Wall Street betting is 13-5 on Dempsey, with many freak bets announced. One bet is 1-6 that Tunney will not answer the bell for the third round, or $1,500 to $9,000.

Alabama Prepares For The Opening Game With Millsaps, Many Injuries

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Sept. 21.—With their cocked eyes on Vanderbilt, to be played one week from Saturday, as well as on Millsaps college, opponent of this week, the Crimson Tide of Alabama, troubled by a small squad in which to form their ranks and troubled by injuries to different players which prevent their being in the best of shape, is preparing for the opening game.

While Millsaps is not regarded troublesome, the Crimson Tide know that several members of Vanderbilt's coaching staff will probably see the game and will therefore be forced to confine their activities to straight football mainly. Nothing will be used in the game that is to be counted on as a good means of attack against Vanderbilt. For Vandy is out for the Rose bowl champs and the Crimson Tide are out for Vandy.

The Crimson Tide have scrimmaged many days since their uniforms were first issued and these scrimmages have not revealed any startling unlooked for strength to the Crimson followers. The Crimson Tide are really in a dangerous condition now. They have a number of men, men like Reverra, Skidmore, Barnes, Johnson, Taylor and Brown, suffering from injuries that will permit them to play but will also hamper their style to some extent.

Alabama's light backfield and 180-pound line has been running signals for more than an hour every day, for the Crimson Tide must perform like a machine more than ever this season if Alabama expects to rank with the best conference teams.

Stockingless as they have played for years, the Crimson Tide of Alabama, fewer in number as a squad than they have ever been before, worked out here Monday in a final bit of preparation for their opening game here Friday afternoon against Millsaps. Alabama's opening game is a mere teaser compared to what the Crimson Tide run into the following week at Nashville.

There remains little doubt but what Alabama's varsity squad is

Danville Man Talks of Road

J. E. Stephenson, Danville visitor to the fair, today stated that the people of his section are badly in need of a roadway between these cities and Danville. Mr. Stephenson declared that the Danville road is a sore spot with his people; that they are anxious to have the road built and are depending upon the people of Albany-Decatur to take some action on the building of the connecting link. If the road was completed, said Mr. Stephenson, the trip could be made here in 40 minutes. As it is, the longer trip takes an hour and a quarter and that takes too long for the farmer, said the Danville visitor.

And when Beppo had arranged his famous scrambled eggs on the table, he threw up the blinds, drew back the curtains and switched off the electric light. By the constant sound of a high-pitched voice, the presence of the bandage, the sudden silence when he had appeared, he knew that there was drama in the sitting room. "Life" as he thought of it. "Christa

"I now beg Christa"—he rose and stood in front of her—"to do me the honor to become my wife."

"Sweet Dio, life!" Teddy Sherwood had reached the advanced age of twenty-four, Tony was older than Regent street at twenty-three, and Christa was as old as Fulham itself at her hard-won eighteen years. But when food appeared, and such food too, that was the time for the pause. Hence daylight, the announcement, the bow, the flamboyant exit behind the scenes.

In the cold grey light of that April morning, Christa's ballet skirt and Tony's queer many-colored clothes became more bizarre than ever. They gave these two the appearance of belonging to a circus which had drawn up its pegs, packed its tents into caravans, faded away into the early mist and left them high and dry.

The delicate coloring of Christa's face had also faded away. It was now a most ashy white, as the breast of a dove. The strain through which she had been made her limp and tired but it had not succeeded in taking out of her eyes the glory of new life, the joy of first love. She had never been later in bed than twelve o'clock before.

It was the sudden change from artificial light to that of truth and sanity that brought Sherwood down from a high fever of feeling to a flat subnormal. He accepted his position on the sofa to which Tony had supported him and lay stretched out with both hands over his face. Luck, of which he heard so much among the adventures of his acquaintance, had gone dead against him.

And then Tony began to speak. "Teddy, old man," he said, very simply and quietly, "I didn't know that you felt about Christa like this. I didn't know how long you've been round with her or that you'd asked her to be your wife. It would have made a great deal of difference in my behaviour last night. I assure you, but none at all in the way things have gone. I can't explain to you the fact that it was meant to come like this in any better words than Christa has used. I can only say that, but for your meeting through you, she wouldn't be alive at this moment. Ah, that makes you take on a kinder expression, doesn't it?

And as to your idea that she shall look up and prove me to be who I am—well, right, I agree. She won't find that I'm the damned good fellow that you are, were luck, but she will find that my father's as honest as yours was. Let the name down, Christa, and the address. It's Stirling, the Earl of Stirling, 320 Grosvenor square. Of all men living, he can tell you the worst of me, and will. Stirling—it's a good name, and a good word. But somehow, when I was born, they forgot to put in the gold. And to your chance that I haven't asked Christa to marry me, that's true, old man. I took it that that went without saying when such a girl as she is concerned. But so that you shall have the satisfaction of knowing that I intend to play the game this time, as you would in the same circumstances, and it couldn't be played better than that, I now beg Christa—" he rose and stood in front of her, still very simple and quiet—"to do me the honour to become my wife, and take the only thing I've got to give her, my everlasting love."

"Oh, didn't I say he was the only bloomin' gent I've ever struck?" And with his hands still over his face, afraid to look in Tony's despair, Teddy Sherwood heard a little cry, a little rush, and a kiss that he would have given his soul to win.

PART II
AFTER THE WAR
I

The officer who rose to his feet as the waiters left the room was a Squadron Commander in the Royal Air Force. He was a man of about thirty-eight, wearing a line of ribbons, and his round face was still boyish in spite of his long service and many wounds. Although he had been an actor before the war, well known in London for the portrayal of those brusque, precocious and argumentative young old men whom Shaw had found so useful in the exploitation of his irrepressible ideas, it was obvious to all his brother officers that he welcomed the opportunity to steady his voice which was afforded by a volley of cheering. It was an emotional occasion, and the fact could not be hidden even by the most care-hardened flying man among the large body of admirers. They were, in fact, wearing uniform for the last time that night.

He took off his wrist watch and put it on the table in front of him. He pushed his half-empty glass back and herded together a collection of walnut shells with a hand that insisted on trembling. Then, with his chin tilted at a rather aggressive angle, and one side of his mouth twisted into a nervous smile, he waited for silence with that affection of slight surprise which had become familiar to his admiring audiences in the war-off days of peace. With a few differences in his uniform, he might have been "Blunt-chill" in "Arms and the Man" again.

"Gentlemen," he said finally, in a loud and resonant voice. "This, then, is the end. I don't mean of war, which we were not permitted to finish, owing to the craving of the politicians to get into the limelight of us. Our day is over. We are out. From tonight we join the ranks of the swelling army of the unemployed. The few of us who have been practising every known trick since the Attila-like order to get out of uniform may think which ever they like of the numerous gods that have been dragged into this scrap. The others, and among them I am going to leave the Service that we have done our best to bring to efficiency, without the slightest joy."

There was a sharp burst of applause. He glanced all about him with an eye trained to read the faces of the people out in front. In this case they were for the most part, young faces, those of beardless boys, but on them all were stamped the lines of physical strain, here and there of great suffering, and here and there of fear. Every eye was focussed upon the speaker, every head strained forward. Silence followed the almost unanimous approval of his statement like the letting down of a shutter.

The second of my reasons for stating that we face demobilisation as a sinking heart is personal. It is, however, almost equally grave, and it affects every one of us in exactly the same degree. It is the question to do—Are we, like so many of the men who have shaken off mud and blood and crawled out of the trenches, to throw ourselves angrily on the country and demand to know what it is going to do for us—cry out that we are some of those who prevented the enemy from spoiling our homes and ask to be kept in return? Or what? How are we going to live? How are we going to keep our heads above water? As expert flying men, most of us dragged out of school before we had the chance to finish with books, the rest looking round to see the jobs we occupied before we joined up now filled by other men, what are we fitted for? The only one of us, so far as I can find out, who has received an offer of work is a Wing Commander whom we love, passing the love of a brother—I mean Stirling Fortescue, the greatest officer and the best fellow....

Tony's lips went tight and his eyes glinted as every man in that room sprang to his feet and yelled. It was a roar that must have been heard as far away as Charing Cross, and as it went on and on like the heavy waters of a cataract, he hoped that it might float into the window of the room in Pantons Street, Haymarket, in which he had installed Christa that afternoon.

"And you will be duly impressed and full of congratulations when I tell you that he has been offered the opportunity, so exactly fitted to his worth and services to his country, of playing the cornet in an officer's street band."

The heavy sarcasm of this announcement fell like a bomb, and an involuntary groan rose up. There was a moment of utter silence, during which it was seen that the Squadron Commander was making a great struggle to be able to speak his final words without breaking down under his deep emotion. "Gentlemen of the Royal Air Force, which dies to-night in this room, I hope to God with everything that may be decent in my soul, that we shall never forget each other of the Service to which we belonged. We are out, over, and up against it. One fight is ended and another begins. We shall do our damndest, each one of us, to play the game as befits the uniform that we discarded to-night. If we have the luck to find a new job, whatever it may be, let's work as we have always worked. And if we have to starve in the manner of the R. A. F. Tony will play the cornet like an old stage door with my chin tilted, and you, I know it, will keep your tails up through thick and thin."

And then, with a dead-white face, he stood at attention, with shoulders squared, and in a voice that was almost out of control, began to sing the first bar of the National Anthem. On their feet, in a like manner, every man present gave voice most faithfully.

God save our gracious King,
Long live our noble King,
God save....

ATTACHMENT FOR DEMPSEY'S SHARE

Kearns' Move Proves Surprise To Tex And Jack

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—(AP)—An attachment for Jack Dempsey's share of the purse, when he fights Gene Tunney Thursday night, was issued in common pleas court today, at the request of counsel for Jack Kearns, Dempsey's former manager.

Tex Rickard was named as garnishee and the bar to secure Dempsey's assets was fixed at $600,000.

Kearns is suing for money alleged to be due him under the terms of a former contract with the heavyweight champion.

Granting of the attachment, which came as a surprise move, took place in common pleas court number five, while Rickard's attorneys were arguing in common pleas court number four against the issuance of an injunction restraining Rickard from paying Dempsey and Tunney any money in advance of the fight in violation of the Pennsylvania law.

This action was started last week by a "tax-payer" and ticket holder, representing Kearns.

Band And Patrol Are Competing

The membership campaign, in which the band and patrol of the Albany-Decatur Grotto club are competing, is moving slowly and Secretary Dickinson today urged increased action. The petitions received now will be acted on in time for initiation of candidates at the ceremonial to be held on October 4 in Birmingham.

Fire Department Guards 2 Plants

The Albany fire department "stood by" last night while the fireworks at the North Alabama fair were being "touched off." The department stayed at the scene as a matter of precaution to safeguard the Home Oil Mill and the Union Compress where large quantities of cotton were stored.

Unusual Tribute Paid To Boswell

W. F. Boswell, member of the Decatur board of aldermen, who was re-elected in Monday's municipal election, was paid an unusual tribute by the voters of his city. Mr. Boswell is out of the city, being in North Carolina at the bedside of his wife, who is ill. This prevented him making an extensive campaign, despite which handicap he was re-elected handily.

A Big Difference

People are getting cautious nowadays. They reason to the point. The public is no longer fooled by medicines for which extravagant "cure all" claims are made.

Remarkable sales prove that we have faith in the straightforward explanation that "Cystone" is based on the long-used prescription of a successful physician, who after constant study found a combination of drugs which quickly relieved kidney trouble with all its annoyances.

Adcock May Go To Hunt Brothers Interest Deepens In Tent Meeting

J. R. Adcock, well known local man, plans to leave this afternoon for Florida, in search of his brother, unless word from him is received by the time of departure of the southbound train. B. M. and E. L. Adcock, brother of J. R. and E. R. Adcock, are in Fort Meyers, which was in the path of the hurricane. No word up to a late hour today, had been received as to the fate of their brothers, and the two local citizens were very much worried.

Though it was Monday night the congregation was good and the interest fine in the tent meeting in Fairview.

Large numbers came forward for prayer and several professed faith.

Old time conviction prevails in the meeting to such an extent that some were so deeply convicted they could not sleep.

The preacher was aroused from his bed at midnight to pray for and instruct the convicted.

Evangelist Farrar has announced his subject for tonight, "The Broad and Narrow Road," illustrated on the black board.

The tent is located in Fairview at the junction of Somerville and Hartselle pikes and everybody is welcome.

Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.

To be well, keep your eliminative system active! The kidneys are the blood filters. If they fail to function as they should, there is apt to be a retention of body poisons. Symptoms are a dull, languid feeling and, often, toxic backaches, headaches, and dizziness. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is sometimes shown by burning or scanty excretion. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water and the occasional use of a stimulant diuretic. Doan's Pills have been publicly recommended by more than 50,000 endorser. Ask your neighbor!
